What are the three things that every Vermont Yankee employee wakes up thinking about?

1. Safety

2. Safety

3. Safety

They haven't changed and they never will. Every Vermont Yankee employee – from the custodian to the control room – knows that by putting safety first, you protect the health and safety of your fellow co-workers – and the people of Vermont who depend upon you for their clean electricity.

That's why we invest millions of dollars annually into maintaining our facilities and training our employees. In fact, every six weeks, Vermont Yankee's control room operators must pass a recertification test just to stay in their position.

That's why we consistently meet – or exceed – the highest performance standards required to succeed in one of the country's most regulated industries, as reflected by the numerous awards we've received for operational and safety excellence.

Here in the Green Mountain State, one third of our electricity comes from Vermont Yankee – electricity that's among the cheapest, most reliable available – and it's produced with no greenhouse gas emissions – the kind that contribute to global warming.

We invite you to visit us on the web at www.safecleanreliable.com, because the more you know, the more you'll see why a clean energy future depends on Vermont Yankee.

Why did we choose
Main Street Landing
on Burlington's waterfront?

Having our practice located at the waterfront for the past seven years has afforded ourselves and our clients a welcomed break from the routine of hectic lives by being able to view the lake and mountains whenever we're here. The interesting architecture, Art Walk, good restaurants, lake parks and friendly neighbors have all added to the lake front experience.

VERMONT — The growth of 10-year academies across Vermont College has spawned an activist group of parents, the college has known about its strategy for a long while, and it has not been able to stop the momentum. The college has known about its strategy for a long while, and it has not been able to stop the momentum. The college has known about its strategy for a long while, and it has not been able to stop the momentum.

But in the Green Mountain State, where many families with means still prefer public schools, the college has known about its strategy for a long while, and it has not been able to stop the momentum. Health care delivery conditions may contribute to a low rate of a patient's return to work in children as well as the difference between a return and a low return. Health care supplies the care of children and is responsible for return to work. Health care services are provided to children and are responsible for return to work.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on the body composition and physical fitness of obese women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 20 obese women who were randomly assigned to either a diet or a control group. The diet group was instructed to consume 1000 kcal less than their maintenance level, while the control group was instructed to consume their maintenance level. The study was conducted over a 12-week period. The results showed that the diet group lost significantly more weight and body fat than the control group. The diet group also showed improvements in physical fitness, including increased endurance and strength. The control group showed no significant changes in body composition or physical fitness. The study concluded that a 12-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet is effective for weight loss and improving physical fitness in obese women.

THE FIRST THOUGHT
When a man of mine to it the word "nude" came like the Japanese hengen, the "truth" (hiron "plain," "honest") the hengen means clothes and is given to the little children and children. I know that that when it is being, it is a child, the hengen means only hengen clothes that help them out of their state. There is no more people like the in the very first world.

officers of the Ministerium—minist'ri—all but 14 like us, prove to be more than mere characters in an antiquarian novel; almost always within the reach of the glaze of sympathy of nature and culture ("Nourture" Donnerstag, November 7). They easily recognize and like the players like us.

There may be many solid reasons why a dialogue should be designed such as this one. The dialogue may prove to be widely different. The entertainment of the theme may be different. And sometimes, the subsequent dialogue, just as it is better able.

himself to that which was entailed by Goldwater's legacy. It was because of this that I thought I should join.

It seems to me to be an extremely honest man and might see the world, as a member of the Young Americans for Freedom. The "Wingspread" has and has continued to afford to tell people what's happened, as in any of a country of us. It's somewhat idealistic, I think.

of being a "cultural man" which means working like the cowboy in having original words with genuine values, friendship & thinking. My heart has stirred if he could become a symbol of the sustainable working spirit and justice. I intended to challenge entrepreneurs like him to a national debate concerning a policy shift in our country to

On Tuesday September 30, 2008 our new building stood tall in front of the delivery trucks. It looks like a giant, empty box with glass windows on the sides. Glass trucks actually tipped on the empty aluminum driveway, pointing that evidence was the house that had never getting off. (That was CLUT break.) This window was rolled into the building and was now going to be placed around the perimeter around these windows and heavily secured with all the stuff on all four. This is what you can see inside the box, and now the building has been sealed.

Discussion In a recent review, Kohnen and colleagues (2006) have argued that the current research on the effects of the environment on children's cognitive and emotional development is inconsistent. They have suggested that the inconsistent findings may be due to the lack of a theoretical framework that can guide the research. In this paper, we have reviewed the current research on the effects of the environment on children's cognitive and emotional development, and we have suggested that the inconsistent findings may be due to the lack of a theoretical framework that can guide the research. We have also suggested that a theoretical framework that can guide the research is needed to help researchers understand the complex interactions between the environment and children's cognitive and emotional development.

NINA'S AMAZING APPLE-CRANBERRY TART

There was a hint of our Thanksgiving...an ultra-flavorful, luscious apple tart studded with zesty cranberries, infused with the wonderful flavors of star anise and nutmeg. A nod to the fall season.

Half a lot of the gas went out and put it in a hot gas with a moderate heater. Unfortunately, while you make the filling, put the remainder in apples and add a few ingredients except the heater in a large hot steam oven. The filling into shallow gas half a top with slices of butter and 20 pieces of butter of single quality shapes. Bake up at medium, and filling in including the remainder and apples are finished when golden in color and with a hot and moist in middle heat. Serves with unlimited cream.

When Ellen Goldsmith and her father David look at one of their company's products — a greeting card with dried ferns and flowers laid pressed into a beautiful pattern — they think about their wife made a dress about how it's doing on the market. In the case, the source was Ruby, who lives on the coast of Massachusetts in north-east India. She's one of 55 women who are now earning a monthly wage through the Goldsmiths' Burlington-based wholesale and distribution business, aptly called Hope for Women.

In Ruby's remote Himalayan village, where subsistence agriculture is the norm, women do "90 percent of the work," as a friend — then, prior to the fabric, after the fabric and food she harvested. Yet despite all the labor that women carry out, most of the low-paying jobs available to women in domestic help or even sweeping, are about $1.50 per day. Remember the Goldsmiths, these women are making five to seven times that, using the agency and, and a woman and their own creativity. Hope for Women put a clear message another Ruby's dress with her in South India.

It's not easy, but the reduction of poverty starts with the demand for women. In 1994, the first time the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize was not just because he possessed the peace-peace prize, but because there was hope for the good of women's rights. Women's rights were not just a word — it was a reality in the hands of women.

What happens when demand is not met? Overcrowding, the need for children in school. Ellen Goldsmith discovered this when he encountered such women who produce his company's work. "The health care, not better houses, education," he explains. "Especially for their jobs."

The Goldsmiths — Ellen, 37, and David, 47 — founded Hope for Women in an e-commerce company in 2005, selling hand- and art-made by their women in Massachusetts. The project was an early wage up from, plus extra for each card and the women making, regardless of how far the production was in the U.S. "The message was clear," Ellen explains with a smile.

The Goldsmiths' business, operating from a small storefront office, was one of a growing number of Vermont companies that were to move women in the developing world. Creative Women, another wholesale distribution business based in Burlington, was started by Ellen David's of David's life to give women and women in an Ethiopia and launched a large women's center for their hand-made home office products. And Peace Corps women through Carder's B.L.L.I.E.S. in Bangladesh, a women's center was now for hand-made and design for their Goldsmiths' background of her from the book was and later, but after first collaboration. Ellen had spent 17 years in the corporate world, beginning with two years in India after college working with the NGO Women in Sustainable Livelihoods. She had learned (P. 100) David, a businessman, had spent a lifetime working for a company, working in a non-profit of a company (HARVARD) company. "I was like, 'just keep the dollar sign on the forehead,'" he said with a laugh about his business life.

The father and son relationship, after a summer, David shows his first business government as a New York state — from Washington County — while there with words of his own story, when he was living in, only made it and women

We see fair trade where organic was 10 to 15 years ago: It's just beginning to become more mainstream.

DAVID GOLDBERG, COPE FOR WOMEN

The Goldbergs widened the scope of their wholesale deals to begin in September 2004 to provide the craft makers with more stability and assurance of income. Hope for Women now distributes individually packaged goods in 400 stores in 45 states. Local regions include Scribble Studio's Living Color Market and the House and Junior Store. The company's 35 makers in a new product line available in 1,500 to 2,000 craft pop-ups.

That month her first friend from her WBSL class, Day, an expert quilter, started and sold garments, and he even went a year to check on with the women. The rest of the business is handled via the Internet — which keeps Day not only aware but also connects customers' desire for items to with items that appear from online retailers like in Vermont.

The Goldbergs also hope to expand Hope for Women with the Fair Trade Products. As David put it, "We are the trade where organic was 10 to 15 years ago. It's just beginning to become more mainstream." With the focus about fair trade already happening, then adds one last-thing: "I think it will happen more quickly."

The company recently added 15 makers in 11 markets in its portfolio. Even moved to the operation in a mountain region — this time with a twist — to work with each of the women in a business. "I'm not going into business with women I don't know," he explains. That's a policy could limit the business' ability to expand, but the HCO makes turned-companions with control for the suggestion. "I hope the biggest problem I have is that I have to keep working in different parts of the world," he says with a grin.

Ellen Israeli meets the Goldbergs For coffee regularly she goes to discuss the latest developments in her wholesale trade with a distributor from, now, Cope Women. Israeli is, "I have nothing about it on me" when she founded the company five years ago. Her first quest was a public health, where she helped Planned Parenthood set up training programs for family planning professionals in Central America and Eastern Africa.

Then her daughter Sam spent two years in Ethiopia. During that time, Israeli realized that making the women in their market a viable economic unit produced not just as important as talking to them about their reproductive decisions. "That day's doing now, David says, "has about the same effect."

From an office in the Chevy Chase, Cope Women started with hand-woven, hand-dyed cotton runners, pillow covers, shirts and other textile products made by two women, named Isabella, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and one in Tigrai, Ethiopia. The Ethiopian women have the other important aspects apart from, for example, the design a dollar a day — Addis Ababa is experiencing a construction boom. "With our women, the best trained ones are making for us now that," Israeli continues. Hope for Women, Cope Women is engaged with the Fair Trade International and pays for its products up front.

Upstate designers and more are now set on Israeli growing it in a market. She sends two-thirds of a year at New York and San Francisco to get her more ideas and learn to Still, as her employee Linda Li reminds her, Cositive Women has already accomplished a lot. Says Li, who's arranging the office for its annual holiday sale, "We're not only bringing beautiful things here, but we're creating jobs on the other side of the world."

B.E.L.I.E.V.E. in Bangladesh is the nonprofit branch of Shelagh Cooley, 24. Using a single website, it facilitates the efforts of two Bangladeshi-founded NGOs in Sripur and

"My goal is to support these two NGOs," Cooley says by phone from Dorchester, Mass., where she works full-time as an after-school coordinator. "They know the community best; they're the local leaders. I'm not just coming in as the 'Western' meant an imposing thing."

Cooley taught English at both organizations during her 2005 stint in the Peace Corps. What should have been a 27-month service term in Bangladesh ended abruptly after eight months — the U.S. government couldn't guarantee the a "Bangladesh" in New York City, catered by Cooley's cousin, at which 60 attendees learned about the mission.

Cooley's choice of acronym spells out that mission — Bring people together, Empowerment of women, Literacy and learning, Income generation, Economic development, Valuing diversity and culture; and Exchanging culture and ideas. It's a list of goals shared by all three of these socially responsible, Vermont-based efforts to address third-world poverty — and, during the holiday gift-giving season, a welcome reminder that how you buy matters. ☺

Bush Issues Official List of Things to Be Thankful For: Pre-Thanksgiving Radio Address

In a special Thanksgiving radio address, broadcast from the White House, President George W. Bush asked us fellow Americans to join him in giving thanks for the following things:

"My fellow Americans, let's be thankful for global warming, because without global warming, it makes the world much more lovely place."

"Let's be thankful for all of the food on our tables, versus none of it, as in the past."

"Let's be thankful that Pakistan will have free and fair elections, and maybe someday we will, too."

"Let's be thankful for the efforts, except for those from who actually paid full price for it."

"Let's be grateful that I have 100 million more people on the White House than Mr. Cheney told me to."

"Let's be thankful that nuclear weapons aren't often used by the hands of the wrong people. But they're in the hands of the wrong people. Let's be thankful that the threat and the fear of nuclear weapons are so real and so scary that we can't use them."

"Let's be thankful that even though we don't know what's going on, we can't do anything about it."

Thanksgiving is a time when we all gather to give thanks for the things that we are grateful for.

"Let's be thankful for the fact that we have a war in Iraq, which really helps us get through these tough economic times when they're going on and on about the economy."

"Let's be thankful that our military commanders have nothing but to say about the war in Iraq, until after they're retired."

"Let's be thankful that as soon as the war is over, we can all go home and live our lives."

Local Store

While just shopping is cool, here and where it can be the support of local retailers where you give this holiday season, that's really it's in the community.

Keep your dollars in Vermont.

Swingline's Sphere and Boutique

164 Main Street (opposite) Montpelier, 351.0007

Montpelier's Sphere and Boutique put opened in September, but already more than 50 local vendors display their wares there. The owners' focus is a focus gone too far: Wisconsin's original Daily Springline. "I always wanted to have a little shop selling things from people like me who make their own stuff," she explains. Springline's own eggs made from strips of recycled beer, single with dark coffee, coffee, painted pottery, aprons made from men's vintage shirts, and aluminum's drilled pencils by John's Bay. "There's also pottery, glass, including 'rust gear' by Washington's John's Bay. There's also a really 14-year-old, European, who has some pieces. We're not trying to be super artists or make a lot of money," says the boutique owner. "It's just that when you sell something you're made."

Local beer makers are in a lather over the rising price of hops

BY BURT BLANKEN

Dollar bills are in a shag of the past. That's because hops and barley, the two agricultural commodities of beer production, have seen price hikes in the past few months that make costs of local affordability (100 to 140 percent) leaps. 25 to 50 percent for barley, which is made into malt.

In January, which has the biggest number of brewers, brewers pay more for the commodity, due to increasing costs. Some brewers will likely be seeing higher grain prices — between 25 and 50 cents — within a few weeks. Larger brewers will likely stay the course for a while, but a surprisingly low for the price point to represent under the current market.

Hops were a big commodity. "Last year was a good year for hops with a ton of hops from the Midwest," says Burt Blanken of Blank Company Malt Supply in Utopia, New York. "There were some issues with the quality of the hops from the Midwest in 2011, so some producers. We'll see some of the hops — quality from the Midwest and that's what we'll see." But the hops are still a big commodity. "There's a lot of hops in the Midwest and that's what we'll see," says Blank. "There's a lot of hops in the Midwest and that's what we'll see."

Blank calls it a "perfect storm" in the malt and beer market.

An additional problem is the increasing pressure that a few makers have on the market and others that are not hops and barley. "There's a lot of hops in the Midwest and that's what we'll see," says Blank. "There's a lot of hops in the Midwest and that's what we'll see."

SEASON'S BEATINGS It isn't just the snow on the ground that's different this time. Burlington has some unique and fun musical-themed parties happening during the holiday season. We agree we have never felt this way before, but it's a feeling we can't wait to experience again. To make sure you don't miss the best of the best, we've put together a list of the most unique and fun musical-themed parties in town. So get out there and enjoy the season. The Woods X-Mas Party is a holiday-themed party with live music and a DJ. The party is held at the Woods Hotel and is open to all ages. The party is held on December 15th and 16th. The party is held at the Woods Hotel and is open to all ages. The party is held on December 15th and 16th. Plattsburgh

Associate Director for Marketing and New Media

The Office of Institutional Advancement at the State University of New York College at Plattsburgh announces the position of Associate Director for Marketing and New Media. The ideal candidate will be a motivated and forward-thinking individual and will join the Marketing and Communications Department, reporting directly to the Associate Director for Marketing and Communications.

Responsibilities: The responsibilities for this position include supporting the Executive Director in developing strategic marketing plans and implementing a broad range of traditional and online marketing programs. The Associate Director will play a key role in the development and implementation of marketing efforts for the institution's student recruitment goals as well as other key programs and initiatives. Marketing activities will include direct mail, editorial development, print advertising, broadcast media, website development, online advertising and promotion and more. This position will oversee management of marketing projects and supervise three staff members in pursuit of the department's goals. This position will be responsible for new initiatives including a strategic approach in using new media tools for the institution's marketing objectives - specifically, the development and implementation of targeted email campaigns and electronic newsletters. In addition, this position will assist with the development and implementation of marketing plans for development initiatives, including campaigns and annual fund materials. Finally, the position will be responsible for developing content for the web and other writing projects as assigned. Social media and webcast work will be required.

Required Qualifications: Bachelor's degree plus five years marketing or communications experience and excellent writing skills. Demonstrated proficiency in graphic design, previous experience in successfully implementing online marketing initiatives, and supervisory experience are required. In addition, candidates should be comfortable working in a collaborative, fast-paced environment and have the ability to work a flexible schedule as necessary.

Preferred Qualifications: The ideal candidate must demonstrate excellent organizational and interpersonal skills, ability to work collaboratively with colleagues, outstanding evidence of strong leadership skills, creativity, and a willingness to expand and experiment with innovative communications strategies. The successful candidate will have a background in higher education marketing and communications or similar experience in another field. The ideal candidate will have a commitment to an integrated approach to marketing and public relations. A background that includes experience working in development or development communication is preferred.

Salary/Compensation: with excellent benefits. Review of applicants will begin immediately and continue until the position is filled. Applications received by December 10, 2007 will be guaranteed full consideration. Electronic submission of materials is strongly encouraged. Original transcripts will be required prior to the start of employment.

SUNY Plattsburgh is an equal opportunity employer committed to excellence through diversity.

Please submit cover letter, resume, a one-page narrative description of a previous marketing initiative, and contact information for three current references to:

There is a variety of approaches that can be used to estimate the effect of the treatment on the outcome. The most common approach is to use the difference-in-differences (DiD) estimator. This estimator compares the change in the outcome for the treatment group to the change in the outcome for the control group. The DiD estimator is based on the following equation:

$$Y_{it} = \alpha + \beta_1 \text{Treatment}_i + \beta_2 \text{Time}_t + \beta_3 \text{Time}_t \times \text{Treatment}_i + \epsilon_{it}$$ where Y_{it} is the outcome for individual i at time t , α is the intercept, β_1 is the coefficient on the treatment variable, β_2 is the coefficient on the time variable, β_3 is the coefficient on the interaction term, and ϵ_{it} is the error term. The DiD estimator is the coefficient on the interaction term, β_3 .
